A LOVING CUP FOR THE COMMANDER

Night of Surprises at William Logan Rodman Post.

Thomas W. Cook for the Sixth Time Installed at the Head.

Mustering in Officer Not Forgotten in Presentation Ceremonies.

It was an evening of surprises at a regular meeting of William Logan Rodman post, 1, G. A. R., last evening, and the many comrades of the post who were present will long remember the event.

It was the occasion of the mustering in of the newly elected officers, which duty was performed by Colonel Charles Thompson, P. C. of post 75, of Stoneham, who was ably assisted by P. C. James O'Laughlin of the same post. It was Commander T. W. Cook's sixth year as presiding officer, and Colonel Thompson's fifth successive term as installing officer, and both comrades of the post and visiting officials thought the event called for something more than the ordinary exercises. The result was that several surprises were sprung, not only on Commander Cook, but on his post and Colonel Thompson as well. Even the ladies of Woman's Relief corps No. 53 took a hand in the proceedings, and the meeting will go down on the records of the post as a most fitting inauguration of the new century.

Commander Cook's Loving Cup.

The following are the officers who were mustered in:

Commander—Thomas W. Cook.
Senior Vice Commander—Henry C. Slosson.
Junior Vice Commander—James Flood.
Quartermaster—Charles T. Burgess.
Chaplain—Simeon P. Luscomb.
Surgeon—James L. Bryant.
Officer of Day—William W. Atwood.
Officer of Guard—George H. Whipple.
Adjutant—Samuel S. Broadbent.
Sergeant Major—Alexander O. Pierce.
Quartermaster Sergeant — Josephus Buckley.

During the installation exercises Colonel Thompson broke in by summoning Officer of the Day Atwood to the centre of the floor. It was such an unusual proceeding that the commander, whose face was like scarlet with surprise, thought his officer was in for a reprimand, when, to his surprise, after saluting the installing officer, Comrade Atwood addressed remarks to Commander Cook and in a neat speech presented that gentleman, in behalf of the comrades of the post, a most beautiful sterling silver loving cup, appropriately inscribed. It is seldom that Commander Cook is found without words, but his boys "had him" that time. After awhile he expressed his thanks in a manner which was indicative of itself that he appreciated the recognition.

The cup stands six inches high, is gold lined and ornamented with three handles. It rested in a satin lined plush case, and bears the following inscription: "Presented to Commander Thomas W. Cook of Post 1, Department of Mass., G. A. R., Jan. 2, 1901."

Scarcely had the commander recovered from his surprise when Mrs. Nannie L. Simmons, president of the Woman's Relief corps, No. 53, demanded admission to the hall, and in appropriate words presented for the corps $25, which is to be added to the funds of the post. To this Commander Cook responded for the post, and then all hands adjourned to the banquet room and partook of an oyster supper prepared by Comrade Chase. There were covers for 100, and after cigars had been lighted, Commander Cook, who presided, called for remarks. In his introduction of Colonel Thompson he spoke in complimentary terms of the post's mustering-in officer, and after touching on the high regard in which he is held, presented him, in behalf of the comrades, a silver shaving cup and a silver lamp.

This was a poser for Colonel Thompson, who had visited New Bedford prepared to spring a surprise on the post and to be thus assailed was a little more than he figured on. It was not down on his programme, but the colonel soon responded and, in the course of his remarks, spoke in glowing terms of the work of the boys of '65. His mention of Admiral Dewey as one of the heroes of the civil war elicited spontaneous applause. Colonel Thompson presented the post, in behalf of P. C. O'Laughlin and himself, a gavel made from wood taken from the stateroom of the flagship Olympia, which had been occupied by the admiral when he annihilated the Spanish fleet at Manila.

Of course this called for another response from the commander of the post. He, too, spoke in glowing terms of the achievement of the hero of Manila and assured Comrades Thompson and O'Laughlin that the token would ever be cherished by the comrades of the post.

Remarks were also made by P. C. O'Laughlin, P. C. Marden of Stoneham, Senior Vice Commander Slosson, Chaplain Luscomb, and retiring Chaplain Taylor. In his introductions of each speaker the commander made pleasant allusions to the comrades.

Officer of the Day Atwood was also called upon, when he read an interesting letter from the father of the post, A. S. Cushman, which paid a high compliment to the worth of Commander Cook as the leader of post 1.

In conclusion the commander spoke in very complimentary terms of the Standard, as the friend of the G. A. R. William G. Kirschbaum of the Standard, who was presented, congratulated the post, in behalf of the paper which he represented, for the happy beginning of the new century, and wished for the veterans of the organizations many more prosperous years. With the singing of Auld Lang Syne the meeting adjourned.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Observance Successfully Carried Out by G. A. R.

Many Assembled to View Parade and Other Features.

Fairhaven Had One of Its Largest Celebrations.

The entire celebration of Memorial Day was carried out to the letter of the arrangements, and the parade and other features were entirely successful. The Grand Army posts turned out exceptionally well.

In the forenoon the graves of soldiers and sailors were decorated, the roll of honor being read and prayer offered at each cemetery. Promptly at the time arranged, in the afternoon, the procession moved to the common where the Soldiers' and Sailors' monument was decorated. The services here included the reading of Lincoln's Gettysburg oration by Master Frederick Edwards of the High school and prayer by Rev. J. H. Buckley.

The procession was an attractive feature, and along the route and at the Common thousands of people assembled to see it. The formation was as follows:

Carriages containing Mayor Ashley, Chief of Police Mason, President Mason of the common council, and Medical Director George F. Winslow, U. S. N.
Carriages containing disabled Veterans and invited guests.
Flower wagon, with women of the Relief Corps.

After the exercises at the Common the parade returned through Pleasant to Market streets, passing in review before Mayor Ashley and Chief Marshal Lawrence in front of the library building.

The march in review attracted a crowd which filled City hall square. The different commands passed the reviewing stand in excellent order.

Just as the parade passed the reviewing stand a drizzle set in and caused the crowd to scatter for shelter, but it was of short duration, and all the commands returned to their headquarters without getting wet.

After parade the New Bedford Brass band and Sullivan's band entertained a large number of people with band concerts at City hall square.

POST 1, G. A. R.

Adopts Resolutions on the Death of President McKinley.

At a regular meeting of William Logan Rodman post 1, G. A. R., held last evening, the following resolutions, introduced by Comrade Austin S. Cushman, were adopted:

Whereas, it is appropriate that in this period of our national sorrow we should incorporate into the current history of our post the sentiments which we feel as veteran volunteer soldiers and comrades in the Grand Army of the Republic; therefore

Resolved, That we deplore the assassination of the late William McKinley as the most diabolical act which has ever occurred, and the most astounding revelation of the depth of human baseness to which anarchy can descend.

Resolved, That this asylum for the oppressed of all nations shall never become the shelter of assassins and anarchists, and that the land which we helped to save is too sacred to afford them shelter. We, therefore, demand that all anarchists be transported beyond our boundaries or incarcerated as are the insane or criminals.

Resolved, That we shall always revere the memory of our martyr president and cherish the comradeship of which he was the embodiment even in the days of his highest honor.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon our records and that they also be open to publication.

IT8 35TH ANNIVERSARY.

Interesting Historical Address on Wm. Logan Rodman Post.

Anarchy Touched Upon By Comrade Charles Thompson.

Work of the Grand Army Is Not Yet Finished.

William Logan Rodman post 1, G. A. R., celebrated its 35th anniversary last evening, when there was an unusually large gathering of members of the organization. Immediately following the regular meeting a clam boil was served in the banquet hall. Albert R. Broadbent and Edward Gary furnishing the music during the supper. At the conclusion of the supper Commander T. W. Cook made the following address:

Comrades: We meet tonight to celebrate the 35th anniversary of the organization of our post. Our depleted ranks reminds us that we are fast approaching the time when we may again find ample accommodation in any small room of similar size to that wherein on the 27th of September, 1866, the obligation of our order was administered by Comrade A. S. Cushman to those who applied with him for a national charter, and we came into existence as Post One of the Department of Massachusetts. Since that time we have enrolled among our members 725 comrades, and now, after 35 years of constant activity we have dwindled to nearly the same number as we bore upon our rolls on January 1st, 1868, fifteen months after our first meeting. I will not waste your time in the sad reflections which naturally arise from such facts, but prefer to contemplate briefly the noble record of your achievements, especially as your fidelity to the order has won for you the well earned title of being now the oldest continuously working post in the entire organization. There is no other post today which can open its records for inspection and show a like succession of regular meetings, regular reports to the department, and the punctual and uninterrupted transmission of dues as a part of its practical work. Nor has any other post, through its membership as well as by its recorded action, had a more important influence upon the growth and permanence of the Grand Army of the Republic. For we may well claim for our post laurels won by any of its members, as in actual service the regiment or company felt a pride when any of its members won a medal of honor. And so tonight I know you will be pleased to revive recollections of those who were active in a distant past and to contemplate important events which have been but slightly noted in history or nearly forgotten, but which contributed materially to the establishment of our order and the maintenance of the high esthetic standards which have endeared it to every patriotic citizen.

When post one was formed there were no printed rules and regulations as at the present time. The ritual was printed with the title "Ritual or Post Regulations," as appears from a copy printed by Fisher & Field, printers, 561 and 563 Broadway, N. Y. There was no uniform, nor any official badge. The organization seems to have been controlled or governed solely by means of the orders of Dr. Stephenson as provisional commander in chief until after the convention which assembled at Indianapolis, Nov. 20th, 1866, pursuant to such an order and not in compliance with any constitutional provision. To this convention posts were invited to send delegates, without any restriction as to numbers. It is not, therefore, surprising to find that out of 239 persons present there were 33 generals, 35 colonels, 24 majors, 4 surgeons, 74 captains, 17 lieutenants, 6 chaplains, 18 sergeants and but 3 privates, and further that New York was represented by only one person, Pennsylvania by 3, Ohio by 15, and Indiana 161 (more than half of the entire convention hailing from that single state). Only three organized departments participated, the others being provisional departments at the time. How loosely the organization held together in the west where it originated may be inferred from the fact that in seven years thereafter Wisconsin had a membership of but 167 comrades, Illinois 233, Ohio 768 and Indiana and Iowa not a single post. The senior post in Illinois is Nevins post No. 1, which was chartered Oct. 3, 1866, but 123 other posts had become extinct before that time. The senior post in Ohio is Forsyth post, No. 15, of Toledo, chartered Nov. 19, 1866; that of Indiana is Auten post, No. 8, of South Bend, which survived some 300 posts previously chartered. The order was in an inchoate condition. Its growth had been phenomenal, the activity of men who endeavored to render it subservient to their political aspirations. In fact, among the avowed results which were designated to be accomplished by this organization at that period of its early history was sub-division. Fifth section, second article, "For the establishment and defense of the late soldiery of the United States, morally, socially and politically with a view to inculcate a proper appreciation of their services to the country and to a recognition of such services and claims by the American people." The order had in a few months outgrown the ability of Dr. Stephenson to direct and control it, and when the convention met its proceedings failed to remedy defects in the ritual or to provide adequately for the government of the order. The election of General Hurlbert disappointed the aspirations of Dr. Stephenson, who was selected to perform the duties of adjutant general, and it was but natural that the necessary duties of that official should weigh upon him with greater force when he labored under the constant depression of blighted hopes. Correspondence accumulated at the national headquarters till it was neglected and official business suffered stagnation.

It was fortunate in those days of disorganization and inefficiency that the office of provisional department commander of Massachusetts was held by a comrade of this post, and that his energy and zeal in organizing this department had caused his election as the first commander of this department, when it became officially recognized on May 7th, 1867.

In the fall of that year Commander Cushman opened correspondence with other commanders and the assistant adjutant generals in neighboring states relative to the difficulty of transacting business with national headquarters and the defects in the ritual, as well as in the rules and regulations which had been promulgated subsequently to the appointment of the committee on "work and ritual" by the convention of Indianapolis, and invited them to an informal conference at Springfield in this state. It was not a cabal seeking office, but a consultation over existing weaknesses and a consideration of such changes in organization and administration as should bring order out of chaos, insure regularity and a more perfect consolidation. Among those present were Senior Vice Commander-in-Chief McKeon and the assistant adjutant general of the department of New York, W. A. Bramhall, as well as prominent comrades from Rhode Island and Connecticut, together with the district commander General Lee of Springfield. As a result of this consultation the commander-in-chief was urged to convene the national encampment; defects in the ritual and rules and regulations were discussed, and a general understanding reached that efforts would be made at the next encampment to bring about needed improvements. This important conference has never before found mention in any history of our order, but merits notice now, since the national encampment which was held in Philadelphia Jan. 8, 1868, was largely [illegible] and recommendations were made [illegible] that better [illegible] was established [illegible] national [illegible] to the national capital [illegible] transaction of business was facilitated. General Logan, then senator, was elected commander-in-chief and infused new life into the organization. N. P. Chipman of Washington D. C. whose long experience as a staff officer during the war eminently fitted him for the position, was made adjutant general and brought its business into a well defined and working system. Comrade A. S. Cushman reported an improved ritual, which was adopted in place of the original one of Dr. Stephenson; and as appears by the Journal of that encampment proposed the adoption of a uniform and a badge. In fact, he had in his own department, previously prescribed uniformity in dress for the parade, which had been ordered by him in Boston on the 7th of October, 1867, in honor of General Sheridan. At this encampment at Philadelphia Comrade Alonzo H. Quint of this post was also elected chaplain-in-chief, and Comrade Cushman a member of the council of administration. In the following year Comrade Cushman was appointed assistant inspector general on the staff of General Logan, and Comrade Quint was elected a member of the council of administration. This council held a meeting in New York city Oct. 27, 1869, and considered carefully the rules and regulations and the ritual, as well as the form of badge for the order. Comrade Quint once stated that when three words distinguishing the principles of the order were under discussion, he proposed the last one, "Loyalty," and the initial letters F. C. & L. as our symbols.

The "three grade" ritual was reported by the council, and was adopted as a substitute for that of Comrade Cushman, which had been adopted the preceding year at Philadelphia, but as thousands of comrades were lost to the order who were disinclined to accept it, it was abandoned May 10, 1871, at the national encampment in Boston, at which Comrade Quint was a delegate, and the order returned to a single grade ritual, such as has been in force since that time.

Among the events which brought our order conspicuously before the public was the night torch parade ordered by Department Commander Cushman, and hereinbefore alluded to. All veterans were invited to conform to the prescribed uniform and join the procession, in consequence of which the order, though then in its infancy, presented such an imposing appearance that it was credited with a much larger membership than it really possessed. The newspapers were not slow to announce every preparation, praise its discipline and spirit, but published broadcast throughout New England the avowed principles of the order and such facts as could be gleaned of its rapid extension in the west. Among some of the journals of the day were some who cavilled at our being a secret society, and charged us with participation in politics. Within one month after this parade, Department Commander Cushman issued general order No. 9, in which he used this language: "It is essential that we should not compromise our position by entering the arena of politics, therefore all political action on the part of posts in this command is forbidden." This order was communicated to the press. The next night he organized Storer post, No. 1, at Portsmouth, N. H., and thus laid the foundation stone of another prosperous department. In the national encampment at Philadelphia in about two months after this, he had the satisfaction, after a protracted debate, of seeing the rules and regulations so modified as to adopt the principle of his general order No. 9 as a part of our national organic law for the government of every department and thus redeem our order from the possibility of its being wrecked by political action. I must not overlook the commencement of that splendid work of the relief fund, which originated in Post 1 and spread all over this department, which from the time of its organization has not been equalled either in extent or efficiency of relief by any department in our order. Even in July, 1867, you referred certain demands upon your slender treasury to a committee for investigation and relief; on the 17th of December following you were so impressed with the necessity for systematic work in this direction by means of a standing committee that you referred the entire subject to a committee consisting of Comrades Cushman, Mackie and Luce to prepare suitable provisions for addition to your by-laws. Those provisions without material alteration are still your guide in administering the funds devoted exclusively to the relief of our worthy comrades in distress or their dependent ones. They were drawn by Comrade Cushman and not only adopted by this post, but 5,000 copies of them were printed as a note to the department commander's address in the following month, and distributed as a model for like action throughout this department. A glance at the last report of our assistant inspector general shows that only 33 posts out of 211 have no relief funds, and that the total amount in such funds was $124,480.36, while $29,509.25 was expended by the posts during the year 1900 in relief only.

Incidentally I may remind you that Comrade Cushman was for two years in the city government and was active upon the committee which erected the soldiers' and sailors' monument upon our common. It was he also that initiated and carried through the setting apart of the soldiers' and sailors' burial lot in Rural cemetery, and Chaplain Quint drafted the acceptance of the trust confided to post one upon its dedication. Chaplain Quint has passed from us after many years of tried comradeship and a noble life. Thirty-four years ago last May, when our department was formed in yonder City hall, with almost prophetic utterance he paid a splendid tribute to our order, from which we quote these thrilling words: "Though you have learned the art of war, yet you are really the heralds of peace. You secure its blessings at least, and afford the basis for hope of their continuance to posterity. As in the field the flag was the prominent object to which all eyes turned and which all loyally followed, so the great cause of human freedom and equal rights which it represented, with like loyalty and zeal the Grand Army of the Republic continues to serve with a soldier's fidelity and devotion. Today it starts upon an enlarged field of useful endeavor, with the noblest of purposes—devotion to your comrades and loyalty to your country, under the same flag which witnessed your zeal in its defense, which hallowed your battles and which issued from the smoke and carnage of four years of strife with its folds bright and unsullied, because of your victorious protection and fidelity you stand tonight calling upon all who testified to their love for the Stars and Stripes by a common experience in the march, the bivouac, the tent, the hospital, or upon the crowded deck, to unite with you to renew the comradeship which was cemented by dangers in which there was equality of risk and sacrifice, to maintain through life the high standard of loyalty which stimulated you for four long years of trial and suffering, and to alleviate the sorrows of your wounded or sick comrades, and of the bereaved families of those who paid their debt of duty by the full measure of their life's blood. With a brotherhood extending wherever that flag floats, the time is not far distant when the ranks of the Grand Army will include in a glorious fraternity every surviving soldier or sailor who did his duty. No other can enter it. Gold cannot purchase the envied distinction of its nobility. But there will come a time when by the inexorable limitation to human life, the Grand Army will pass away and its activities cease; and when the last survivor of the veterans of the great war of the rebellion shall have been relieved from duty here, and shall have joined the hosts of good men and true marshalled on the farther shore, our order will have left an imperishable legacy to posterity in its brilliant record of benevolence, fraternity and patriotism."

With the shadows gathering around us, with but a few years more of diminishing powers, let us keep the inspiration of his words and work alive in our hearts, and by continuous endeavor add yet more if possible to the brilliant record of old Post 1.

Commander B. P. Fury of the Spanish War Veterans was introduced as the first speaker. He outlined the object of the Spanish War Veterans, now numbering 1,600 in Massachusetts, and said he hoped the spirit of good fellowship would continue to grow between the Grand Army and the young organization which is struggling to build up a membership.

Comrade Charles Thompson of Stoneham, said that post 1 was always dear to him. He could add nothing about the Grand Army than what had been touched upon by Commander Cook. The five years which he had served as installing officer of the post had been pleasant ones. The Grand Army of the Republic, he said, was an organization that displayed more fraternity than any other organization in the land. It was an organization which had expended more for charity than any other, not to its members, but to outside [illegible] of the ranks. The soldiers of 61 did their work at the front and then came home and began taking care of the families of the comrades who fell in battle—something which the government should have done. It is the Grand Army that has made this a united nation with one flag. But our work is not yet accomplished. The national government should make laws to supersede state law, and any one who takes the life of a president should be dealt with by the federal authorities and not by a state. Those who come here from a foreign shore should at least respect the flag. There should never be allowed a parade with any flag other than the Stars and Stripes. People who come here to make this country their home should be made to respect the flag. Give us a federal law making it compulsory to teach only the English language in every school, and no man should be admitted to citizenship until he can read and write the English language. These are some of the things which we should do to wipe out anarchy in this country. There's work for us to do yet—to preach these doctrines before we are done with our labors. In conclusion he recited the following original lines:

Death softens passion's fiercest rays,
Subdues all bitterness and hate.
We mourn alike the blue and gray
And comrades true of '98.

Captain Fred P. Hawes of John A. Hawes camp, Sons of Veterans, in speaking for the sons said that the camp was always ready to assist the post whenever called upon.

In introducing the next speaker, William G. Kirschbaum of the Standard, Commander Cook spoke in complimentary terms of the Standard as the friend of the Grand Army of the Republic. Mr. Kirschbaum spoke substantially as follows:

"It is certainly a pleasure to meet with you this evening in the revival of the recollections of this, the pioneer post of Massachusetts. I well remember when this post was organized, and I haven't forgotten your first Memorial Day. Did you ever stop to think that the present interest manifested in our cities of the dead is due as much to the Grand Army as to any other factor? Previous to the establishment of Memorial Day but few lot owners in either of our cemeteries did much more than keep their lots looking nicely. Some, it is true, decorated graves on the Sabbath, but the great majority simply kept their lots looking well. But with Memorial Day you infused an interest in the care of these cemeteries which will never again be allowed to return to the former method of care. Any casual observer can see the great change which has been wrought since the first day that you decorated the graves of your departed comrades. You have your dead, others have theirs; and so Memorial Day has come to be the acknowledged of all days for this duty, when the memory of departed friends is freshened and their graves are strewn with floral offerings. Town and municipality have established the custom of preparing for this day, and when you are dead and gone Memorial Day will live on.

"Yours has certainly been an interesting record. I can but add that each and every one of you should feel proud of the honorable record which this post has achieved. It is not to the lot of every organization of the Grand Army to lead off in such a commendable manner, and I congratulate you. New Bedford should feel proud of her boys of 61, and you have reason to take an honest pride in this record.

"Just think of it—it was this post which first originated the idea of a post relief, now an essential feature in the Grand Army of the Republic in every community in the union. It was this post which planted the first Liberty Tree, an idea which has since been followed by other and more prominent posts in the country. Yet the honor is yours, and when time brings us all to that level which knows no difference, the name of William Logan Rodman post will be mentioned with honor and pride by those who take up your work.

"It is no little honor, gentlemen, to thus win distinction in a nation which numbers 76,000,000 of people, and you are to be congratulated that you have among your members men endowed with the brain to make such undertakings as have characterized your efforts the success that they have proven."

Major William E. Mason of Boston, a member of Post 1, expressed pleasure at meeting once more men who had been with him at the front. He indorsed the utterances of Comrade Thompson. He believed in Americanizing every man before allowing him to vote, and thought that the present congress would legislate in dealing with anarchists.

Comrade John H. Lawrence spoke briefly, touching upon the great love of President McKinley for the Grand Army.

Comrade Sergeant W. H. Carney, said he was proud of every soldier, and the son of a soldier should make a good citizen. He was proud of the record of Post 1, and believed that there were more long service soldiers in this post than in any other post in this part of the state. He added that while engaged in his new duty much of his time would be spent in Boston, but he thought so much of the post that he should never take his name from the roll of the post, but would always continue his membership.

Comrade Wing of Marion and Chaplain Luscomb spoke briefly on matters particularly interesting to members, and with the singing of "America" the festivities came to an end.

G. A. R. LOVE FEAST.

Posts 1 and 190 Heal Their Differences at a Clambake.

Restoration of Unity the Keynote of the Speechmakers.

Union Clambake of Grand Army and Sons of Veterans Enjoyed.

A genuine love feast was the union clambake of the G. A. R. and Sons of Veterans at Brooklawn Casino. The event signalized the restoration of complete harmony between post 1 and post 190. The posts have been divided both in fact and in feeling ever since there came disruption in the ranks of post 1 several years ago, which resulted in the withdrawal of certain members, and their establishment of post 190. The feelings engendered by the separation have been bitter at times, but last night the differences were healed, and it was agreed to exist in complete accord with each other. All the speeches of the evening bore especial reference to the feelings newly cemented by the attendance of both sides at the celebration.

The clambake was prepared by a union committee representing the two

Commander Cook of Post One.

Commander Robbins of Post 190.

Grand Army posts, and camps 130 and 35 of the Sons of Veterans. The members of these organizations and their women friends were present in large numbers. Altogether over 300 people sat down at the tables and enjoyed the excellent clambake provided by the management of the Casino. Among those present were:

Music was discoursed by Carver's orchestra during the feast.

After the clambake had been served and eaten Thomas W. Cook, commander of post 1, and chairman of the joint committee, addressed the gathering as follows:

If is with feelings of the highest satisfaction that I unite with you in the festivity which may be regarded as both the termination of a sad period of wasteful depression and the beginning of a new era in our local Grand Army experience, which I trust may continue until "taps" shall sound for the last survivor of the posts represented here tonight.

Sometimes conditions occur in the experiments of a chemical laboratory, when but the movement of a single atom causes the different constituents to undergo a reaction which extends throughout the entire mass. So there are times when a single individual thought presented opportunely finds general acceptance and radically modifies feelings and sentiments which previously prevailed. It is a matter of no small satisfaction that an idea which came to me, but a few days since, and was submitted after hours of doubt and hesitation to my comrades of post 1, has this evening borne such golden fruit. With a unanimity which found no exception they adopted the suggestion and charged me with the agreeable duty of asking the co-operation of our sister post in its execution and development. It brought joy to my heart when success was assured by the acceptance of the proposition that we unite in the festivities which your joint committee has provided this evening for our entertainment, and I gladly welcome each and every comrade to this feast of restored harmony.

The past is a closed book whose stereotyped pages cannot be changed; but the fresh, bright pages of the opening future are ours to be filled as we will. From this auspicious evening let them bear testimony to the strength of our devotion to the principles which you all profess, and the exercise of the broadest charity which manifests itself not only in sympathy for the weak and deserving wards of our Grand Army, but in a spirit of forbearance and toleration towards all who wore the blue in the great trials of our nation. We have a common purpose, and have all assumed the same simple obligations. We should have the same lofty incentives to make our order as illustrious in the principles of fraternity and charity as it has been and continues to be in patriotic loyalty to the flag and to our own free institutions.

We have and shall have for many years the feeble comrade who cannot work, the sorrowing and weeping widow, the comrade who finds no employment for his willing hands, and the comrade who needs encouraging and sympathetic words and counsel to strengthen him in the hour of his despair or of his temptation. We all have opportunities for usefulness in extending the helping hand and bringing gladness and sunshine to many a weary, aching heart.

Together, unitedly, we may and should help each other. Co-operation will render us strong, and as our individual powers flag with increasing age our singleness of purpose and our united actions will secure for us the public support to reinforce every effort which we may make and help us to bear every burden which we may assume. The field of our operations as an order has widened with the progress of time. We are not, and have not been content with simply caring for the needy and destitute or with promoting otherwise the welfare of those who stood together for the preservation of our free institutions.

The marvelous growth in population in our own city resulting from immigration of thousands of those who have come here from other shores to cast their lot with us and become American citizens impose upon us a constant duty as loyal, patriotic Americans. We welcome them to their new home, and the protection of the flag, and would gladly have them participate in all the exercises with which we perpetuate the memories of our revolutionary fathers or celebrate the anniversaries of events which tell the stories of the struggles for national life, and its transmission for the enjoyment of a free people.

Let our children and their children alike learn to respect the flag, to love the country as we loved it with a devotion that meant sacrifice as well as adoration, and let our women, as their women, alike, train the coming generation in a systematic development of the physical and moral qualities, the will, and energy of the child, and young man, that shall make him the highest type of an American soldier glorying in the past which made freedom his legacy, in defense of which no sacrifice is too dear.

Comrades all, our women and our children, let us all cherish the words of the immortal Lincoln: "With malice toward none, with charity for all, let us strive to do the right as God gives us to see the right, to bind up the nation's wounds, and care for him who shall have borne the burden and heat of the day."

Comrades, united and strong, fervent and active in advancing the principles of our order, increasing its fame by our zeal and efficiency, and winning for the American volunteer the admiration of every man, woman and child who finds a home beneath the American flag.

"Comrades known in marches many,
Comrades tried in dangers many,
Comrades bound by memories many,
Brothers ever let us be.
Wounds or sickness may divide us,
Marching orders may divide us,
But whatever fate betide us,
Brothers still in heart we'll be.

"Comrades known by faith the clearest,
Tried when death was near and nearest,
Bound with each by ties the dearest,
Brothers evermore to be.
And if spared and growing older,
Shoulder still in line with shoulder,
And with hearts no thrill the colder,
Brothers ever let us be.

"By communion of the banner,
Crimson, white and starry banner,
By the baptism of the banner,
Brothers of one church are we.
Creed nor faction can divide us,
Race nor language can divide us,
For, whatever fate betide us,
Comrades of one flag are we."

Mr. Cook was warmly applauded in the course and at the conclusion of his address. He next introduced Charles F. Shaw of post 190 as toastmaster. "Commander Cook struck the keynote," said Mr. Shaw, "when he spoke about unity. This is the first union clambake of posts 1 and 190. Now that word union sounds Greek to me. You know that in our younger days, when we used to go courting, if we liked the girl, we used to pick quarrels so that we could have the pleasure of kissing and making up. Well, we have had our quarrel. Tonight marks the commencement of an era of good feeling for the two posts. We have come together on the common ground of friendship and fraternity. That's what we should have done years ago. There is no reason for the existence of differences between these old soldiers. We stood shoulder to shoulder on the field of battle, and perhaps drank from the same canteen. There is no friendship stronger than that of fellow soldiers, and we should maintain that friendship. We are glad to be here tonight. Our ranks are decreasing all the time, comrades, and we should not be unmindful of the fact. As our ranks become depleted, we should fill up the gap by closing together as we used to do when we went to face the charge."

Mr. Shaw introduced as the next speaker Rev. George H. Bates, pastor of the Pleasant street M. E. church. Mr. Bates gave an interesting dissertation upon clams, and referred to the characteristics of some of the men in his regiment, who came from the Duxbury clam region. Continuing, he said: "I am particularly glad to be here on this occasion. It is the reuniting of the old bond, which never can be divided so long as the old flag waves. This unity is one great pulse of beating response to the Stars and Stripes which we fought to uphold; one answering consecration to the call of our country. And I am here tonight to say God-speed to any sign of unity of spirit."

At this point Toastmaster Shaw read the following telegram:

Orange, N. J., Oct. 17, '02.
Thomas W. Cook, Commander Post 1, G. A. Republic, New Bedford:

I congratulate you on the realization of your plans for the restoration of harmony and good feeling among the posts of New Bedford. May it last till we are all mustered out.

Yours always,
A. S. Cushman.

The next speaker called upon was Charles Thompson, commander of post 5 of Stoneham. "The meeting here this evening," he said, "is certainly a pleasure. It is rght, and should have taken place long ago." He reverted to the fact that on a previous occasion in this city he had spoken of unity between the posts, but that the idea was regarded as impossible. "But tonight it has been realized," he continued. "You remember that during the war it was brother against brother. The brothers are united today. There are no men today more ready to defend the Union than those who tried to destroy it. And there are none, I am sure, who are more glad to renew the feeling of unity in this city than the members of post 190. We are here to extend the hand of friendship, and express our loyalty, not only to the government, but to one another, but we can't do it while one comrade holds enmity against another comrade. Let us then, for God's sake, forget the past and live in the future. Let us be one post here, so as to get accustomed to it and its friendly association, so that we may be more fully prepared to be one post when we find ourselves united in the other world."

Senator Rufus A. Soule, a comrade of post 190, who was next called upon by the toastmaster, said: "I never get up in a public place like this and say anything which I do not mean to say. I yield to no man in my love for the Grand Army of the Republic. Every man in post 1 is my friend as I am his, as much as this is true in post 190. But I have no hesitation in saying that when the posts separated it was the best thing that ever happened for the G. A. R. in this city. There was dissension in post 1, and on account of it some of us felt it a duty to go out. It improved the post, and if now I was outside of the local Grand Army and should come to this city and look for good comradeship I shouldn't hesitate to look for it from post 1. I take no stock in urging only one post. We have here three or four Methodist churches. They prosper and get along amicably. And so it is with our posts. We can keep on running in good shape, one striving to outdo the other in friendly rivalry, and can meet, as we do tonight, in genuine fraternity." In closing Mr. Soule urged that the posts should continue, doing what they could for the G. A. R., in a friendly way, "and when Memorial Day comes," he said, "we should unite as man and man, all organized to pay tribute to our country's loyalty."

Senior Vice Commander Henry C. Sisson of post 1 was the last speaker. He said: I don't care whether there is one or two posts. It is fraternity and charity I want to see exhibited. I know we all have loyalty. But we want every brother to have charity for another brother's shortcomings. We all have our shortcomings. What is desired is charity and friendship for all men. I care not whether there be one or two posts, only if we are agreed."

The meeting came to a close with the singing of "America" by every one present.

The committee of arrangements, whose efforts were attended with so much success, were:

Chairman—Thomas W. Cook, commander of post 1.

Treasurer—Charles T. Burgess, quartermaster of post 1.

Secretary—George T. Duckworth, captain of camp 35, S. of V.
